Michelle Little is an artist who captivates audiences wherever she goes with her heartfelt brand of country music. Influenced by legends like Patsy Cline and Reba McEntire, she has graced renowned stages from the Sydney Opera House to Nashville's BluebirdCafe.

Michelle's discography includes the EP 'That's What I Like' (1999) and two studio albums, 'Hear Me Now' (2008) and 'Invincible' (2021). She also released a live album, 'Michelle Little Sings the Songs of Patsy Cline' (2016), showcasing her tribute during the Tamworth Country Music Festival. Her most recent releases include the self-penned, 'Time To Sing' (2024) and the Lyn Bowtell co-write, 'I'm Ready' (2026).

Both of these singles recorded and produced by Michael Carpenter of The House Studio. After graduating from The Sydney Conservatorium of Music, Michelle quickly made Sydney's vibrant Inner West her home. However, 2025 saw the singing-songwriting school teacher going back to her roots in the Central West of NSW where she continues to spread her love of music to audiences of all ages.
